Tuesday, 27 April 2010

In April Radka Atanasova from the Paisii Hilendarski University of Plovdiv was a guest at Higher Vocational State School in Włocławek. During her stay she delivered lectures for students from Russian Philology. She is interested in contemporary Russian Literature since some her lectures concerned contemporary Russian writer - Ludmila Unicka whose literary work was translated into 25 foreign languages. She also delivered some lectures concerned Dostojewski's composition. She is also interested in Poland, its literature and language. As a student of Russian Philology at the University of Shumen she learned Polish language. She took part in many Polish language courses at the University of Warsaw. She appreciated Polish hospitality and students' maturity.
